

Up ghost river
Lauren basisty

The main piece of my art is the hour glass and the broken bottom. This main piece represents how Ed's and everyone's childhood and memories were broken and taken away with time. Over the time they were taken away with what happened and what they went through at the residential schools. the top half of the hourglass represents the childhood being the river that was kinda like his get away place and the hearts represent the family love he grew up surrounded with. overtime the sand darkened and change through the school and he left behind all his memories and love he had and experienced at a young age and his perspective on life and people or family members. The broken bottom represents how once broken they struggled to overcome and heal from what happens in the school. The school and chair were a big part of his memories and trauma he has now and he is trying to cope with. The snow is the last part because is was always a dark time and his family could never really be whole again with Ed's experiences he never will act the same because of all that and his family struggles to be whole again
